

Change and progress are often feared. Just as the guy who used to shoe horses lamented the arrival of the automobile (and his insuing loss of business), traditional radio broadcasters fear the wheels of progress that Satelllite radio represents. Satelllite radio succeeds because it provides services and content which are not available in the style and quality from land based radio stations. Let the marketplace decide. Satelllite radio is truely a service which represents technological progress combined with the democracy of free-trade.

Best regards,
Tom Moyer